

DIPLOMACY

Vol.71, Jan. / Feb. 2022

Contents of Features

- 67 Russia's hard-line stance towards NATO and its domestic background
The two principles of Russia's actions that are making the situation in Ukraine tense are the logic of security, which wants to keep the former Soviet Union countries in its sphere of influence, and the logic of domestic politics.
Shuhei Mizoguchi (Hosei University)
- 74 Popular discontent and power struggle in turbulent Kazakhstan: The difficulties of dismantling the Nazarbayev regime
Behind the large-scale armed clashes that erupted in Kazakhstan are power struggles among leaders, the agendas of neighboring countries, and criticism of the political system led by the former president who imposed a "parliamentary rule."
Tomohiko Uyama (Hokkaido University)
- 78 The diplomatic boycott of the Beijing Winter Olympics: Europe's expectations
In response to the U.S. government's call for a diplomatic boycott of the 2022 Winter Olympics in Beijing, European countries have shown a variety of views.
Norito Kunisue (Asahi Shimbun)
- 82 Democracy in Latin America at a crossroads: Regional mechanism in support of democracy protection is weakening
The Organization of American States (OAS) is being shaken up by an increasingly authoritarian regime that has threatened to leave the regional framework. The decline of U.S. power and the conflict between the left and the right in the region are upsetting democracy in Latin America.
Hiroyuki Urabe (Dokkyo University)
- 98 Oil market becomes politicized: The structure of instability
The rise in the price of oil, which began with the coordinated production cut by OPEC plus in May 2020, will lead to higher prices worldwide. The conflict between producing and consuming countries, as well as the global trend toward decarbonization are pushing these trends.
Ken Koyama (The Japan Institute of Energy Economics, Japan)
- 104 Japan's strategy and challenges toward decarbonization: In the wake of COP26
The author who has covered COP26 points out the gap between Japan and the rest of the world in accelerating decarbonization and discusses the need for a clear commitment to a "coal-free," bold institutional design.
Kyoko Gendatsu (NHK)
- 110 "Freedom of movement" and border control measures during the COVID-19 Crisis
The spread of COVID-19 poses a challenge to the "movement of people," which is inseparable from globalization. In an age when "isolation" is no longer possible, border control measures based on appropriate risk assessment are necessary.
Yoshiyuki Sagara (Asia Pacific Initiative)
- TREND2022
- 118 North Korea's New Year's Report talks about the continuance of status quo
Atsuhiro Isozaki (Keio University)
- 120 Libya shaken by the postponement of the Presidential election
Amane Kobayashi (Embassy of Japan in Libya)
- 124 Post-pandemic choice made by Canada - the country founded on immigrants
Yasuhisa Kawamura (Ambassador Extraordinary and Plenipotentiary Embassy of Japan in Canada)
- 128 Manga as culture, manga as a diplomatic tool: Looking back at the 15 years of Japan International Manga Award
Machiko Satonaka (Manga artist)

The World and Japan's choice in 2022

6 Cover story Interview

Japan's Diplomacy in 2022: Harmonization with like-minded countries is essential for economic security

Yoshimasa Hayashi (Foreign Minister of Japan) and Akihiko Tanaka (GRIPS)

16 Roundtable: Japan and the stratified international order – Norms, democracy, and economic security

The U.S. and China hold different views of regional order. Confrontation has thus become more structured, expanding into a new diplomatic realm of values, rules, economics, and technology.

Maiko Ichihara (Hitotsubashi University), Kosuke Saito (Sophia University), Ryo Sahashi (University of Tokyo), Sanae Suzuki (University of Tokyo) and Junko Tanaka (NHK)

30 Security environment facing Japan and issues for strategic review

The security environment surrounding Japan is rapidly deteriorating due to the intensifying competition between the U.S. and China and nuclear-armed states that are attempting to change the status quo. Analysis and strategic thinking are needed to redirect security resources to areas that are truly necessary.

Masashi Murano (Hudson Institute)

34 Deepening Mutual Distrust between the U.S. and China in the Indo-Pacific: No silver bullet for improving relationship

The U.S. and China are competing to invest resources in the Indo-Pacific region, which could bring certain benefits - but the danger of a zero-sum confrontation cannot be ignored. How should the conundrum of U.S.-China relationship be resolved?

Patricia M. Kim (Brookings Institution)

39 Does human rights violations sanctions law have any effect? U.S. Magnitsky Act – it's significance and criticisms

The Magnitsky Act, which is seen as a means of "human rights diplomacy," is spreading to the EU and other countries. The Magnitsky Act is being applied to Myanmar, China, Saudi Arabia, and other countries. Will the sanctions bring about a change in the behavior of sanctioned countries?

Hiroki Sugita (Kyodo Tsushin)

43 China in 2035

China has declared that it has reached a lull in the long-term socialist strategy of Deng Xiaoping and has deepened its confidence in the one-party rule of the Chinese Communist Party. What are China's plans and strategies for strengthening its "Chinese power" and heading into 2035?

Tomoki Kamo (Keio University)

49 "China factor" rocks Taiwan

China's aim is to create a public opinion in Taiwan that accepts reunification through its daily efforts. There is a limit to what can be done while protecting Taiwan's democracy and the focus will be on how to avoid isolating Taiwan.

Koichiro Ishida (Asahi Shimbun)

53 Multitiered "democracy problem" of ASEAN

Authoritarian rule is increasing in the Philippines and Thailand. However, ASEAN has come to prioritize domestic stability over democracy so the situation cannot be captured by the construct of "democracy versus authoritarianism."

Maki Aoki (JETRO)

60 Roundtable series: Can Europe be a leader of the international order?

1. Europe's Responsibility and Strategy in the Ukraine Crisis

Why has Europe failed to stop the Ukraine crisis? What is Europe trying to do to protect itself in the Ukraine crisis in light of the fact that it has continued to avoid taking tough action against Russia?

Tsuyoshi Goroku (Nishogakusha University) and Atsuko Higashino (University of Tsukuba)
